STRANGE ACTIONS OF A LAWYER.

COURT COMMENTS ON HIS CONDUCT OF A POOR WOMAN'S CASE

LEARNED THAT SHE WAS TO BE ARRESTED AND ACCOMPANIED THE DEPUTY SHERIFF-GOT HER BAIL REDUCED AND DEMANDED

Ex-Judge Alfred Steckler made an application that he be substituted as attorney for Emilie Hejt-manek in place of Theron Davis, of No. 141 Broadterday. The motion was granted. In the course of the hearing some peculiar allegations were made as to the manner in which Supreme Court orders of arrest are made public, and the way in which Bohemians are treated by their lawyers.

Emilie Hejtmanck is the secretary of the Union The programme carried out yesterday was one of the most interesting of the entire week. At the last Saturday morning by a deputy sheriff in an morning session there were ten-minute reports action brought against her by Mary Stransky, the president of the association, in which she was charged with the wrongful conversion of $704, the on Friday last by the law firm of Nekarda & Catlin.
Theron Davis, on behalf of the defendant, applied to Justice Pryor in the Supreme Court on Monday for a reduction of the ball of $500, under which the woman had been held in prison, and Justice Pryor reduced it to $1.
Mr. Steckler yesterday submitted an affidavit made by Mrs. Hejtmanek, in which she said that she lived at No. 1,334 First-ave., and was the wife of a baker, who had a salary of $14 a week. She said she had four children, the eidest of whom was seven years old and the youngest six months. On Friday evening last a man whose name she did not know, but who she had since learned was Lawyer Davis, called on her and told her that papers had been obtained in the Supreme Court in an action brought against her, and that she would be arrested in a few days at most, and probably the next day. He advised her to keep her doors locked. On Saturday morning some one knocked at her door and a Theron Davis, attorney and counsellor at law. She promptly informed her that he was Mr. Nekarda, the firm of Nekarda & Catlin, attorneys for the settle the case. She replied that she owed the tie. Mr. Davis and a deputy sheriff then entered the roam together. She asked who had put the ard under the door, and Davis said it was his card, he then saw that he was her visitor of the night

The woman told how she was arrested and taken of Ludlow Street Jail, her four children, including he baby, being left behind. Davis called at the all in the afternoon, she said, and read a paper to er, which sho signed. She believed it was the right of the said. She believed it was the right of the said. Mr. Davis called at the jail and told er that she was released. He took her home and sked her for $29 for getting her out of jail. of John McGonegal, to Artha Garside, took place at 8 o'clock last evening in the Bloomingdale Re-formed Church, Western Boulevard and Sixtyeighth-st. The Rev. Dr. Madison J. Peters, the pastor, officiated at the ceremony, which was foldaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Schuck, to Led-yard Avery was solemnized last evening at the act for her.

Mr. Steckler said that the whole thing was a very extraordinary proceeding, and that he would like to know how Mr. Davis became aware that the Supreme Court had issued an order of arrest for the deputy sheriff and the plaintiff's lawyer in dragging her away from her six-months-old baby, as heartless and inwarrantable. The first he (Mr. Steckler) knew about the case was on Monday morning, when the woman's husband called on him and retained him Mr. Davis characterized Mr. Steckler's statement as untrue in every particular, and said that the Mr. Davis characterized Mr. Steckler's statement as untrue in every particular, and said that the fact that Mrs. Heitmanck was to be arrested was common property, and he called on her at the request of some of her friends.

Justice Pryor said that the arrest of the woman in such an action was an outrage, and she could sace for false arrest. He asked why Mr. Davis, instead of getting an order to show cause why hair stances to Justice Cohen, who would, he was sure, have at once vacated the order of arrest.

"Woll, the court was closed," said Mr. Davis, 'and I never thought of that. Justice Cohen had gone away."

"You could have got him at his home in such a case as this," retorted Justice Pryor.

The Justice allowed E2 to Mr. Davis for his services.

NO NIGHT RAILROAD WORK NEAR HOTELS. A complaint was made yesterday to the Board of that the men at work near the hotel at changing that the men at work hear the hotel at channing the motive power of the Freedway and the Twenty-third-st, surface railroads made so much noise at night that the guests of the hotel suffered great loss of sleep. President Murphy of the Health Board gave orders that no work near the hotel must be done between the hours of 11 p. m. and 6 a. m. A similar complaint was made by the Helland House managers two weeks ago, and the work at night in front of that hotel was stopped.
